Indo-French business leaders engage to strengthen partnerships

India and France have shared a long and common history and friendship, which has developed into a strategic partnership and now France is the third largest investor in India, said Mr. Michel Sapin, Minister for Finance and Public Accounts, Government of France, at an interactive business session organized by the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FICCI) and the Embassy of France in India on January 25.

He said that to accelerate the momentum of development during the ongoing visit of the French President Mr. François Hollande many agreements have been signed between the two countries. Mr. Sapin added that French companies were known for their innovation and creativity and they looked forward to tap the Indian domestic market.

Mr. Sapin said that the ongoing state visit will allow the two countries to further their converging interests. To discuss the economic and financial subject Mr. Sapin had met Mr. Arun Jaitley, Union Finance Minister of India. Mr. Sapin informed that he had invited Mr. Jaitley to launch an annual dialogue session on matters of common interests.

Speaking about the complementarities between the corporate worlds of the two countries, he said that the business community recognizes the importance and relevance of cooperation in various fields. Hence, the industry on both sides was looking at the unexplored opportunities to enhance the trade and investment figures. Mr. Sapin said that France was also training the Indian workforce under the ‘Skill India’ programme and was contributing actively towards it.

Mr. Harshavardhan Neotia, President, FICCI, said, “Over the years, French investments and business entities have not only stood the test of time, but have firmly reposed their unwavering faith in India’s growth story. Today over 800 French companies are having their presence felt in India. The numbers are impressive and given the thrust by the Government of India, we are certain that the future augurs well for us to witness a quantum increase in fence companies making in India.”

Mr. Neotia urged France to view India as the most promising business and investment destination. Time would then testify that businesses rose to the occasion to herald a new era of cooperation to take India-France relations to newer heights. FICCI News Release

Rural teachers offer creative strategies to boost the learning of their students

Administrators and teachers from schools in remote areas shared their experiences in incorporating innovative teaching models into classrooms, in an event held by the Ministry of Education (MOE) at the Chang Yung-Fa Foundation in Taipei City, on January 24.

Ministry officials said they hoped the symposium would prompt more rural schools to adopt successful methods and spark inspiration for more innovative curriculum designs around the nation.

Sharing sessions took place in the afternoon, where four speakers took turns discussing their respective experiences, such as in experimental and mixed-age education, special fieldtrips, summer camps, creative teaching methods for English and mathematics, and after-hours coursework assistance, among others.

Education Minister Wu Se-hwa said the ministry had dubbed 2015 the “Year of Innovative Action in Education,” and actively explored different ways to guide the development of rural institutions, which often lack resources when compared to schools in urban areas. The China Post

Thailand to give 1-yr tax exemption for SMEs in special scheme

Small and medium-sized enterprises in Thailand will be exempted from income tax for one year and subject to a reduced rate of 10pc for another year if they agree to pay taxes properly in the future.

The Cabinet approved the incentives on December 28 as part of a tax amnesty to encourage more SMEs, which total more than 2.7m or 96pc of Thai enterprises, to enter the tax system.

The finance ministry said SMEs that joined the program would also not be investigated for back taxes.

An SME is defined as a business that reports sales and other revenues of 500m baht or less per year. At present, the corporate income tax rate is 20pc.

The tax-deduction measure is aimed at SMEs with registered capital of no more than 5m baht and annual revenues of 30m baht or less. The Nation
Sino-Saudi trade ties expected to expand

China and Saudi Arabia may develop closer economic cooperation and stronger trade ties this year, as their products are complementary and they have reached a consensus on the Belt and Road Initiative, according to Chinese exporters and commerce officials.

The initiative includes the Silk Road Economic Belt and the 21st Century Maritime Silk Road, proposed by President Xi Jinping in 2013, covers about 4.4 billion people in more than 60 countries and regions.

Zhi Luxun, deputy director-general of the Commerce Ministry’s Department of Foreign Trade, said oil trade lies at the heart of their business ties. But Saudi Arabia’s surging demand for upgrading its infrastructure - such as oil refineries, roads, airports, and oil tanker and container ports - is also providing opportunities for Chinese project contractors and manufacturers.

China exports mainly construction machinery, manufacturing equipment, steel, electronics, textiles, garments and household appliances to Saudi Arabia. Chinese-made passenger vehicles and trucks have also become popular in the region. China Daily

Joint Thai-Vietnamese business council urged

Thailand has encouraged Vietnam to collaborate on a joint business council to help drive two-way trade to US$20 billion (Bt722 billion) by 2020, nearly double its current value.

After meeting with Vietnamese Ambassador to Thailand Nguyen Tat Thanh, Commerce Minister Apiradi Tantraporn said bilateral trade could double within five years under closer cooperation between the two nations’ public and private sectors.

Establishment of a Thai-Vietnamese business council should help increase cooperation between the two countries’ private sectors, in conjunction with the existing Joint Trade Committee, which is a government-to-government mechanism to discuss and solve trade and economic issues.

The target is to drive two-way trade to $20 billion by 2020. In 2014, trade between Thailand and Vietnam was valued at $11.82 billion, up 13.1 percent from the previous year. The Nation

India eyes stronger trade ties with ASEAN states

India is looking to boost connectivity and economic integration with Cambodia, Laos, Myanmar and Vietnam, the country’s trade minister said on January 13.

Speaking at the 3rd India-CLMV Business Conclave in Chennai, Commerce and Industry Minister Nirmala Sitharaman said that there was immense potential to boost India’s trade with the so-called CLMV countries (Cambodia, Laos, Myanmar and Vietnam), which had increased from $1.1 billion in 2004 to $11.9 billion in 2014 according to government estimates. She cited a study conducted by the Ministry of External Affairs which suggested that there was a potential of about $100 billion of additional exports to CLMV countries.

“The trade links and ties between India and the CLMV countries can be much better and the two governing principles – connectivity and economic integration with regional value chains – are crucial,” she said. The Diplomat

Iran, China vow to tighten relations

Chinese President Xi Jinping said on January 23 he hopes to open a “new chapter” in relations with Iran after the lifting of international sanctions under a historic nuclear deal, as he paid the first visit by a Chinese leader to the Islamic Republic in 14 years.

“In cooperation with the Iranian side and by benefiting from the current favorable conditions, China is ready to upgrade the level of bilateral relations and cooperation so that a new chapter will start in bilateral relations,” Xi said after meeting with Iranian President Hassan Rouhani, according to Iranian state TV.

Trade between the two countries stood at some $52 billion in 2014, but that figure dropped last year due to plunging oil prices. China is Iran’s biggest trade partner, and continued purchasing oil from Iran after nuclear-related sanctions were tightened in 2012, despite U.S. pressure. “China has always stood by the side of the Iranian nation during hard days,” Rouhani said, in comments posted on his official website.

Iran’s Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei told Jinping that Iran will continue its policy of bolstering ties with the “East.” He praised China’s “independent” stance in global issues, saying it helps deepen strategic ties with Tehran. Daily Sabah

Vietnam’s processing and manufacturing sectors attracted US$15.23 billion in total foreign investment last year, or 66.9 percent of the country’s total. The China Post
The Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry (PCCI), the country’s largest business organization, and the business community of the Czech Republic, discuss measures to intensify bilateral trade and investments between the Philippines and the Czech Republic.

The Philippines can introduce garments, jewelries, fruits such as mangoes and bananas, information technology products electronics and automotive parts to the markets in Czech Republic as well as promote the Philippines as a tourism destination for Czechs escaping the severe winter, according to President George T. Barcelon of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry (PCCI).

This was discussed by President Barcelon with Czech Deputy Minister Martin Tlapa of Foreign Affairs for Economic Relations during a briefing held on January 12, 2016 on business opportunities for the Philippines and the Czech Republic.

Minister Tlapa headed an economic delegation interested in expanding bilateral trade and investments between the two countries. The PCCI organized a business forum attended by 65 Filipino businessmen at the PCCI head office in Taguig City, Philippines.

Barcelon proposed that PCCI and its Czech chamber-counterpart form business councils as a vehicle to promote and sustain promotional activities in trade, tourism, services, manufacturing and investments.

According to the PCCI president, the 2015 decision of the European Union to allow airlines from the Philippines to resume flights to Europe offer Czech tourists reasonable costs of travel to and from the Philippines.

Within the Philippines, the tourists can also enjoy flying to many vacation spots on low-cost carriers, he said.

In welcoming the proposal for counterpart business councils, Minister Tlapa acknowledged the potential for increasing economic activities. This was supported by Czech Ambassador Jaroslav Olsa, Jr., who accompanied the man delegation.

Minister Tlapa said Czech companies are interested in supplying management services for airports and equipment involved in mass transportation, particularly in railways and aviation.

Czech companies manufacture equipment and parts for several aircraft manufacturers (including Airbus) and also manufacture small planes.

Executive Director Carmelo L. Arcilla of the Civil Aeronautics Board said during the business forum that the liberalization of the aviation industry has enticed unlimited players and enhanced the tourism industry.

COO Donald G. Dee said that the Philippines may have demand for small planes, especially now that there were secondary airports constructed nationwide where short-haul aircraft like the Airbus planes can land foreign tourists on chartered flights from South Korea, Taiwan, and China.
INVESTMENT & JOINT VENTURES IN THE REGION

Philips, EDB arm to invest in digital health firms - Dutch electronics giant Philips will be investing in digital health start-ups with EDBI, the venture unit of the Economic Development Board of Singapore. They inked a memorandum of agreement on Jan 13. It is the first of many alliances with large corporations to support open innovation, said the EDBI. Apart from investment, the partners will use their extensive business networks in the region to help the start-ups break into the Asian market. The partnership will focus on start-ups that have proven products and solutions in areas such as telehealth, telemonitoring and others in healthcare-based big data and analytics. Interested companies can contact the EDBI or Philips, with the first group of start-ups to be announced in the next few months. The amount the two organisations will invest was not disclosed. EDBI chief executive Chu Swee Yeok said in a statement that the partnership will strengthen Singapore’s position as one of the leading digital health hubs in Asia. Business opportunities in this sector will also emerge when the digital health companies base their Asian operations here, said Ms Chu. The Straits Times

Qualcomm sets up joint venture in China for server chips - Qualcomm is setting up a server chipset design and sales unit with a provincial government in China, a move that could help boost the company’s bid to diversify from mobile chips into the server chips market. The chip maker will own 45 percent in the joint venture, Guizhou Huaxintong Semiconductor Technology, that will be 55 percent owned by the Guizhou provincial government’s investment arm. The initial registered capital of the joint venture will be about US$280 million. Qualcomm revealed plans in October last year to enter the server CPU market that Intel dominates, with a customer processor chip built using the ARM architecture. It said in November that it would co-develop the technology with local Chinese companies. Like many other U.S. tech companies, Qualcomm appears to want to take advantage of partnerships with local companies for easier access to the Chinese market. Hewlett-Packard sold a majority stake in its server, technology services and storage business in China to a Tsinghua Holdings subsidiary to boost sales of HP’s enterprise products in the country, while Intel said in 2014 it was planning to invest in local chip companies for the design of mobile phone chips. Far EasTone-China Network Systems deal is approved by regulators - The Fair Trade Commission (FTC) said on December 30 that it has issued a greenlight on a deal that Taiwan-based telecom operator Far EasTone Telecommunications Co. has clinched in preparation for acquiring a stake in Taiwanese cable TV operator China Network Systems Co. (CNS). The FTC said that after reviewing the deal, the commission raised no concerns that the deal will have an adverse impact on market competition, but the approval has been issued conditionally to maintain competition in the future. In late July, Far EasTone announced that it had signed an agreement with Morgan Stanley Private Equity Asia (MSPE Asia) to buy bonds to be issued by MSPE Asia unit North Haven Private Equity Asia IV LP (NHPEA). NHPEA, which is also owned by several Taiwanese individual and institutional investors, will in turn buy a 60 percent stake in CNS from South Korean private equity firm MBK Partners LP. Through the bond purchase, Far EasTone said it will set up a strategic alliance with MSPE Asia. The bond purchase is expected to cost Far EasTone up to NT$17.12 billion, and the debt will carry a maturity of seven years. The China Post

Sinopec, Saudi Aramco sign strategic agreement - China Petroleum and Chemical Corp, Asia’s largest refiner, signed a strategic agreement on January 20 with the Saudi Arabian Oil Company, also known as Saudi Aramco, to further explore business opportunities in the Middle East country’s oil and gas industry. The deal came after construction began on the second phase of a major Red Sea oil refinery, a joint venture between China Petroleum and Chemical Corp, or Sinopec, and Saudi Aramco with the first phase becoming fully operational in April, Sinopec said in a statement. The venture, Yanbu Aramco Sinopec Refining Co, estimated to cost nearly $10 billion, covers an area of about 5.2 million square meters. It will process 400,000 barrels of heavy crude oil per day. Aramco will hold a 62.5 percent stake in the plant, and Sinopec will own the remainder. China Daily

New farming standards introduced to tackle drought in Thailand

Provincial authorities on January 20 prepared a diversified system featuring less-water dependent crops to be presented as an option for drought-hit farmers.

In Nakhon-Sawan, which is badly hit by drought every year despite having many rivers passing through it, the "Bung Platu Model" learning center for agricultural product promotion in Banphot Phisai district, would be highlighted to the premier as a means to tackle drought. The center, set up in collaboration with locals to experiment on less-water-dependent crops, found that the most effective and value-for-money choice was green beans. This has led to many villagers opting for green beans instead of rice.

Almost 90,000 rai in the district is devoted to green beans, which is mainly watered by morning dew and can be harvested in 80 days. Green beans can be sold for 6,000-7,000 baht (US$165-193) per ton—about the same price of unhusked rice. Each day, many farmers came to learn farming tricks from the different demonstration vegetable patches such as aubergine and other vegetables.

Interactive 3D tools assist packaging development

3D technology provider ConceptSauce leverages cloud-based interactive applications for virtual shopping, 3D animations, concept visualization and, most importantly for this audience, real-time online tools for package development and consumer research for retail markets. Abs Chamali, CEO of ConceptSauce, responds to questions.

What is your technology and what does it do?

Chamali: ConceptSauce’s technology offering is a cloud-based platform for 3D graphics creation. Our solutions do not require any plugins (such as Flash) to run, allowing them to be used across multiple platforms. The technology enables rapid testing and visualization of concepts in a 3D shopping environment, and allows clients to add videos and create concept Heatmaps as part of the 3D shopping journey.

How can it help in packaging and packaging development?

Chamali: Our solutions allow clients to visualize packaging design concepts in a store environment. The process of uploading concepts to the 3D store environment is very quick and intuitive, making it ideal for use in iterative design development. It is also possible to insert the store scenarios into online survey platforms, for use in consumer research, with very rapid results.

‘Serious games’ keep the elderly fit, active

So-called serious games are being developed by a research team with the aim of helping the elderly enjoy physiotherapy and avoid nursing care services.

A team led by Hiroyuki Matsuguma, associate professor at Kyushu University’s Graduate School of Design, has already commercialized one game, which involves getting gentle exercise by standing up, and is now working on bringing other games into practical use by asking the elderly to test them.

In December 2015, an event called “locomo fitness circle” was held at the university’s Ohashi Campus in Minami Ward, Fukuoka. A number of senior citizens gathered in a circle to play “Locomo de Balamingo,” a game developed to prevent locomotive syndrome (locomo), or weakened mobility.

A sensor captures movements of their arms and legs, and players can earn points by collecting heart symbols on the screen as they move through caves or the sky.

Australia

Australia not ditching commodities:

FinMin

Despite the sharp plunge in commodity prices around the world, Australia’s finance minister told CNBC that the economy was not ready to give up on a key pillar of the country’s economic model – resources – altogether.

“The Australian economy is clearly an economy in transition from resource investment-driven growth to broader drivers of growth,” Mathias Cormann told CNBC on January 30.

“(But) we’re not diversifying away from resources. Part of the reason the economy continues to grow strongly is that our export volumes in terms of resources have actually increased very strongly and that is on the back of significant resource investment in recent years,” he said.

Despite the sharp plunge in global commodity prices on the back of slowing demand from China, Australia’s economy grew more than expected in the third quarter as a sharp increase in mining activity boosted net exports, data released in December showed. CNBC

Bangladesh

Bangladesh to start full-fledged e-purchase by December

The government is working to roll out a full-fledged e-procurement system by December 2016, which is four years ahead of schedule.

The latest move was inspired by the success of a pilot project, which took off in 2011 with just four ministries. It is running without any glitch.

As of January 23, 42,332 tenders were floated and 25,130 were awarded through the e-procurement system.

The government is determined to fully implement e-procurement by December 16 this year, said Md Shahid Ullah Khandaker, secretary of the Implementation Monitoring and Evaluation Division.

At present, the e-procurement system is running in 110 organizations under 30 ministries for projects under Tk 50 crore each. The Daily Star

Abe to call for training of 250,000 care workers

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe in his annual policy speech will call for training 250,000 workers in nursing care-related fields to reach the government’s goal of reducing to zero the number of people who leave their jobs to provide nursing care for family members, it was learned January 19.

The program is intended to be one of the pillars of his idea to create a society with all 100 million-plus people dynamically engaged.

Abe also plans to highlight the importance of relations with South Korea in the speech, in the context of the deal reached late last year over the so-called comfort women issue. Abe will name South Korea as “our most important neighboring country, with which we share strategic interests.”

The government has set a goal of expanding nursing care to serve an additional 500,000 people by the early 2020s, in part by increasing the number of special nursing homes for the elderly. The Japan News

Korea

South Korea to spend $66 bn fund in supporting new industries

The South Korean government said on January 18 that it would inject 80 trillion won (US$66 billion) of public funds this year to nurture new growth engines, including smart cars, surgical robots and software content, in the latest attempt to realize its creative economy drive.

In a joint policy report to President Park Geun-hye, relevant ministries said they would build Asian versions of California’s Silicon Valley at Sangam, in Seoul, and Pangyo, in Gyeonggi Province, to embrace more innovative entrepreneurs not only from Korea, but also from overseas. The government also plans to turn 17 Creative Economy Innovation Centers into regional hubs to strengthen partnerships between start-ups and large businesses, and to revitalize the local economy.

The massive investment in creative economy signals a major shift in the government’s support priorities as it had focused on developing heavy industries as the nation’s key growth engines in the past. Such policy decisions were made to better cope with structural changes in the nation’s economy from manufacturing to information and communications technology and software industries, officials said. The Nation

Nepal

Inflation at 40-month high of 11.6%

Inflation has jumped to a 40-month high of 11.6 percent, thanks to the prolonged Tarai region unrest which led to disruptions in transport system through southern parts of the country, according to the Nepal Rastra Bank (NRB).

The last time inflation had soared to this high was in mid-August 2012 when it reached 11.9 percent. In mid-September the same year, inflation was recorded at 11.2 percent before it started to decline.

Prices of pulses, legumes, ghee and oil among other food products and clothes and footwear among non-food products have skyrocketed.

“There have been two spikes in prices: 48.9 percent in pulses and legumes subgroup and of 42.3 percent in ghee (clarified butter) and oil subgroup,” the central bank said in its latest report on country’s macro economy. Kathmandu Post

Philippines

Philippine aero industry set to take off

The Philippine aerospace industry is seen to post revenues of up to $1.5 billion in the next 10 years.
From only $5.9 million in 2008, the sector’s revenues surged to $226 million in 2014.
As of the third quarter of last year, revenues from exports of aerospace products already reached $309 million.
The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) said Philippine key industry players composed of aviation parts and components manufacturers, maintenance, repair and overhaul providers, airlines, and aviation training organizations, would join the Singapore Airshow in February.
The Singapore Airshow is a premier event for the aerospace manufacturing and support industries within the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).
The local industries’ participation in the event is organized by the Board of Investments, the industry development and investments promotion arm of the DTI, in coordination with the Foreign Trade Service Corps and the Civil Aviation Authority of the Philippines. Philippine Star

Singapore’s small businesses ‘strong and adaptable’: CPA Australia

Small businesses in Singapore are optimistic about growth in the next 12 months, even if they are apprehensive about the economy, a survey has found.
The findings from CPA Australia’s annual Asia-Pacific Small Business Survey, which is based on responses from about 3,000 small business operators in Malaysia, Vietnam, Indonesia, China, Hong Kong, Australia, New Zealand and Singapore, were released on January 22.
The professional accounting body’s chief executive Alex Malley said 59 percent of respondents from Singapore reported their businesses grew over the last 12 months, up 8 percent from the same survey in 2014.
Furthermore, 57 percent of Singapore’s small businesses expected their own outlets to grow in the next 12 months, despite a 13 percent fall in economic confidence from the previous year. Channel News Asia

Taiwan

Property market sees price drops for upscale areas

Recent developments in the property market in the Greater Taipei area are bucking the trend, with upscale areas showing much sharper decreases in pricing than suburban ones, according to real estate agents.
In Taipei, property prices in upscale areas in the city center such as Xinyi and Daan districts registered an average fall of 6.8 percent in the third quarter of 2015, compared to the same period in 2014, according to data from Yung Ching Realty. At the same time, suburban areas dropped only 2.1 percent.
In New Taipei City, property prices in downtown districts fell 5.1 percent year-on-year in the third quarter of 2015, compared to an only 1.8 percent decline for suburban areas, Yung Ching data showed.
Taiwan’s property market has usually seen prices for upscale downtown areas rise faster during boom times and drop more slowly during downturns compared to suburban areas. The China Post

Thailand

Thailand plans 35 bil. baht boost to rural economy

Thailand will consider a stimulus program worth up to 35 billion baht ($972.49 million) to boost the rural economy, a deputy prime minister said on January 25, as the ruling junta tries to revive flagging growth.
The army seized power in May 2014 to end months of political unrest but has been unable to move Southeast Asia’s economy forward as pivotal exports and domestic demand remain sluggish.
The latest stimulus follows a raft of already approved economic measures, including some 136 billion baht of spending approved in September to inject cash into rural areas.
“We will propose a program to develop and strengthen the grassroots economy,” Deputy Prime Ministry Somkid Jatusripitak, in charge of economic matters, told a seminar.
“Each village will receive up to 500,000 baht, to around 70,000 villages, or worth about 35 billion baht.”
The rural economy has been hit hard by drought and low farm prices, exacerbated by the junta’s withdrawal of the generous subsidies of the government it toppled. Reuters

Vietnam

Vietnam continues to remove tax barriers

The market for Vietnamese enterprises to trade goods, attract investment and participate more deeply in the regional production and supply chains, was opened up with the formation of the ASEAN Economic Community (AEC) on the last day of 2015.
The formation of the AEC meant a series of tariff and non-tariff barriers were removed. Following the achievements of the ASEAN Free Trade Area (AFTA), in the AEC environment, taxation commitments are a priority to facilitate trade liberalisation and the free flow of goods, investment and labour within the region.
Head of the Ministry of Finance’s Tax Policy Department Pham Dinh Thi said that the AEC will bring about both opportunities and challenges for Vietnam as it has to totally cut import taxes imposed on goods bought from ASEAN countries to zero by 2018. Vietnam Net
